

CONSTRUCTION LITIGATION

Billings, Cochran, Lyles, Mauro & Ramsey, P.A. represents owners, developers, associations, general contractors and subcontractors in a wide array of construction related litigation matters. Our construction practice includes the defense of construction defect lawsuits, claims involving defective design and materials, architectural and engineering errors and omissions, contract breaches, along with indemnity, project delay and warranty claims. We also have extensive knowledge and experience defending first and third party water intrusion, toxic mold, soil/groundwater contamination, and bad faith claims.

Our construction attorneys interface with our land use division in the representation of both governmental and private entities on projects beginning with infrastructure development, water, sewage and drainage installation, through the completion of construction. As with all of our practice areas, we are proud to provide our construction clientele with positive results through cost-effective representation of the highest quality.
